The Drywall Interior Systems Contractors Association (DISCA) names B.J. McGlone & Co., Inc. the 2009 Excellence in Construction Award winner in the Retail Project Category. The award is the second this year and is for B.J. McGlone's nearly eight million dollar contract on the Xanadu Entertainment District in East Rutherford, NJ.

McGlone showcases its framing, drywall, finishes and related products throughout this mega-retail and entertainment complex. The 4,500,000 square feet of entertainment, sports, retail, office, and hotel space makes Xanadu the largest such complex of its kind in the United States.

The entertainment district is the hub of the Xanadu project, immersing guests in the latest in music, broadcast, and filmed entertainment, as well as world-class restaurants and clubs. A ribbon of giant digital screens will feature music videos and movie trailers for upcoming releases, while the country's largest movie theater will host film festivals and opening-night premieres. The Project's Unique Features

This was one of the most challenging, among a long list of architecturally unique, projects ever performed by B.J. McGlone & Co., Inc. The high serpentine and "saw-tooth" soffits and fascias were carefully critiqued by the continuous scrutiny of the owner, architect, and construction manager. A tremendous amount of attention to detail was exercised to ensure the conceptual design under extreme lighting radiated flawless construction. Various winding radii that encircled the gypsum-wrapped towers were carefully planned by the entire team to bring to fruition the architect's remarkable design elements. Overall the entire project is an eye-grabbing marvel with twists and turns in every direction providing a high-energy and exciting atmosphere throughout the entertainment district facility.
